National Human Resource Development Plan - Manpower Planning Survey

The Human Resource Development Council is carrying a Manpower Planning Survey to develop a National Human Resource Development Plan. The Plan will be an important tool which will guide the future Human Resource Development policies and which will indicate the areas in which emphasis will have to be laid in terms of education and training with a view to ensuring the timely supply of qualified manpower to employers. It will equally provide a sound basis for career guidance to the student population who would be leaving the different educational streams for the labour market.
